Dear [redacted]

On 17 November 1983 Naval District Washington will be having a luncheon for approximately 200 people. It will be held in the Crystal Room of the Officers Club located in the Washington Navy Yard and will be attended by Naval officers and some Civil Service workers. It begins at 1130 and is concluded by 1300.

Following lunch at 1200 we would like to have someone speak for twenty to twenty-five minutes on a subject of general interest. This is not an in depth briefing, but with the present publicity regarding missile deployment, the possibility of suspension of arms talks and so forth, comments by a person knowledgeable in Soviet affairs would be timely and interesting.

Would it be possible to have a speaker from the CIA join us? He or she would be greeted by the Commandant, Naval District Washington, Commodore J.S. Disher, and would be seated at his table with him. If we have defined our topic of interest too narrowly, we would be happy to entertain your advice on subject matter.

We are running a little late in our request and for this please accept our apologies. If we could however, receive your reply by phone (433-2057/8) we would be most grateful.

Sincerely,

Byran Holderby
